In 1752, Dinwiddie County was created by Act of the General Assembly when Prince George County was divided. The act provided: "Be it therefore enacted, by the Lieutenant-Governor, Council, and Burgesses, of this present General Assembly, and it is herby enacted, by the authority of the same, That from and immediately after the first day of May next ensuing, the said County of Prince George be divided into two counties; that is to say: All that part thereof, lying on the upper sided of the run which falls into Appomattox river, between the town of Blandford, and Bolling's point warehouses, to the outermost line of the glebe land and by a south course to be run from said outermost line of the glebe land, to Surry County, shall be one distinct county, and called and known by the name Dinwiddie and all that other part thereof below the said run and course, shall be one other distinct county and retain the name of Prince George.

From 1702 until 1752 the history of Dinwiddie County is linked to that of Prince George County. Before 1702, both Dinwiddie and Prince George Counties were part of Charles City County created in 1634. Dinwiddie County, except for the town of Blandford, was the parent of the town of Petersburg until 1850 when the legislature granted a charter making Petersburg an independent city. Dinwiddians, in tracing the history of their county up to 1850, should bear in mind that the events and people in Petersburg up to that time were an inseparable part of greater Dinwiddie County.

LOCATION

Dinwiddie County is located in the southeastern section of Virginia, bordered by the counties of Chesterfield on the north, Amelia and Nottoway on the west, Brunswick and Sussex on the south and Prince George on the east. The County's southwestern border is formed by the Nottoway River and its northern border by Namozine Creek and Appomattox River.

Dinwiddie County lies within 500 miles of three of the Nation's major market and population centers and has easy access to these centers through the area's excellent highway, rail, and air networks, nearby market include: Washington, D.C., the nation's Capital, approximately 145 miles to the north; Richmond, the capital of Virginia, 38 miles to the north; and Norfolk and the ports of Hampton Roads, 90 miles to the east. The city of Petersburg adjoins the County at its northeastern limits.

The unincorporated community of Dinwiddie serves as the county seat and is located in the approximate geographic center of the County.

HISTORY

Dinwiddie County was formed from Prince George County in 1752 and named for Robert Dinwiddie, who was the Lt. Governor of Virginia from 1751-1756. The original courthouse was erected in 1852. The new courthouse was dedicated and opened for business on July 5, 1998. Dinwiddie County has figured prominently in our Nation's history. In the campaign of 1781, there was fighting in the County between the forces of the British led by Phillips and Arnold, and the Southside militia under Baron Stueben and Muhlenbery. The title "Cockade City" was earned for the city of Petersburg by the large group of soldiers from this area who participated in the war of 1812. In the Civil War, from June 1864 to April 1865, there was constant fighting in and around Petersburg as General Grant and the Union Army worked toward the city which General Lee and his Confederate troops were finally forced to abandon.

The fifty-odd miles of fortifications and sixty forts and batteries are constant reminders of the Battle of Five Forks and the forty-eight other battles, engagements and skirmishes fought here during the Civil War.

Blandford Church, built in 1735, is now a shrine. Buried in the church yard are soldiers of six wars, among them 30,000 Confederates. Sapony Church, built in 1728, is the oldest in Dinwiddie County and is still in limited use.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT – DINWIDDIE COUNTY AND TOWN OF MCKENNEY

Virginia's counties function under powers delegated by the state and defined by provisions of the Constitution and laws enacted by the General Assembly. The state, by applying a wide or narrow definition to these provisions, can add to or assume the performance of County functions.

The counties perform a twofold function. They serve as agents of the state in that they administer justice and collect for the state personal income taxes and state license taxes. The counties also function as units of local legislative and administrative bodies, performing such acts as passing and enforcing local ordinances, adopting a county budget and levying taxes.

The government of Dinwiddie County is administered by a five-member Board of Supervisors who are elected to serve a term of four years. There are five election districts with a representative elected in each district. However, these supervisors have no magisterial district functions. It is their duty to act on all matters of government in such a manner as may best serve the county as a whole. The County Administrator and the County Attorney are appointed by the Board of Supervisors.

Dinwiddie County provides for the health, welfare and safety of its citizens through the provision of core services. Police protection is provided by a sheriff's department which is assisted by the state police in the area. Fire services are available through six volunteer departments. The County utilizes sixteen full time advanced life support providers, ten part-time EMS providers and over 75 volunteer EMS providers to deliver both advanced and basic life support, first response and transport services. Dinwiddie County utilizes the Virginia Statewide Fire Prevention Code, the Virginia Uniform Statewide Building Code to insure that public buildings and residential development is constructed and maintained in a safe manner.

A Virginia town is a part of that county in which it is located; and therefore, it is affected by that county's ordinances, regulations, and taxes. Consequently, town residents are affected by two local governments-both the town government and the county government — and vote in the elections of official for these two governments. County residents, however, do not take part in town government.

McKenney incorporated as a town on April 29, 1922, operates today under a charter granted by the General Assembly in 1944 and uses the mayor-council form of government. The town Council is composed of five members elected by popular vote to serve two year terms of office. The Town's Mayor serves as presiding officer at Council and is also elected by popular vote for a two-year term.

LOCAL TAXES – DINWIDDIE COUNTY AND TOWN OF MCKENNEY

Under the Virginia Constitution, only the local governments can levy taxes on real estate, tangible personal property, machinery and tools, merchants' capital and the physical property of public service corporations. The rates applicable to the several classes of property vary in different localities, but the true tax rates of Virginia cities, towns and counties are usually well below the average for the county as a whole.

POPULATION

According to the US Census Bureau, the Dinwiddie County population had its biggest increase from 2000 to 2010. The population increased 14.2% from 2000 (24,533) to 2010 (28,001). The town of McKenney grew from 373 (1990 Census) to 483 people (2010 Census).

LOCAL ECONOMY

Dinwiddie County's local economy is characterized by a growing logistics sector, and a strong industrial and agribusiness presence. Government is the leading employer followed by retail trade.

TOPOGRAPHY

Consisting of 321,000 acres or approximately 504 square miles, Dinwiddie County lies mostly in the Piedmont physiographic province with the extreme eastern portion lying in the Coastal Plain. Topography is generally level to slightly rolling in the east and more rolling in the western three-fourths of the county. Elevations range from 50 feet above sea level to 400 feet. Drainage is provided by the Nottoway River (90%) and the Appomattox River (10%).

CLIMATE

The annual average temperature is 61 degrees. In January the average low temperature is 27 degrees. In July the average high temperature is 91 degrees. The rainfall average is 44 inches a year and snowfall is 8 inches. Southerly winds prevail.
